“Clairvoyant Investigation without Tears . . . or Fears” with Kurt Leland

The Midwest Federation of the Theosophical Society in America is hosting a workshop on the subject of clairvoyance at their Springfest week-end and annual meeting April 1-3, 2016, at the Ozark Theosophical Camp and Education Center in Sulphur Springs, Arkansas. The workshop is being presented by Kurt Leland, author, researcher and national lecturer on the subject of psychic and spiritual development.

The word clairvoyant suggests extraordinary abilities, such as perceiving auras or astral presences—but it literally means just “clear seeing.” Don’t we all want to perceive our inner and outer world more clearly? Clairvoyant investigation can allow us to do that through noticing what is present before us—not only to the eyes and other senses of the physical body, but also to the inner senses: the heart-to-heart connection experienced in the astral/emotional body as empathy; the mind-to-mind connection experienced in the mental body as understanding; and the soul-to-soul connection experienced in the causal body as spiritual love. Only our family and social conditioning stand in the way of clear seeing—the tyranny of likes and dislikes. We shed such conditioning through the development of buddhic consciousness, the practice of compassion and unity-based thought, feeling, and action. When practiced thus, clairvoyant investigation becomes a means of spiritual unfolding without tears of frustration or fears of being led astray.

Join Kurt Leland and all of us for an experiential exploration of our capacity for clear seeing in all we do.
